

Dear ASPA Families,

After more than 20 wonderful years as the owner of Amy's Studio of Performing Arts and 37 years as a dance teacher, I am writing to share some personal and exciting news: I have made the heartfelt decision to sell the studio to a new owner who will carry on the traditions and values that have made ASPA a beloved second home for so many.

This decision did not come easily. ASPA has been one of the greatest joys and honors of my life. Watching your children grow in confidence, creativity, and passion has filled my heart year after year. Together, we have built more than a dance studio—we've built a family.

As seasons change, so do callings. Over the past few years, I've felt a deep pull to dedicate more time to utilizing the arts to teach transferable life skills to children for success in other areas of life as well as creating quality of life within the senior community. The Playhouse Collective, Inc. is a nonprofit organization I founded to serve young children and senior citizens through the performing arts. This new chapter will allow me to focus on community outreach, arts education, and creating meaningful intergenerational experiences—work I feel truly called to do. I'm also able to continue teaching my adult classes and will be teaching tap on Fridays for the new studio.

Additionally, I'm looking forward to spending more quality time with my own family, especially my mother, whose support has been an anchor throughout my journey.

Please know that I am passing the baton to someone who shares my commitment to your children's growth, artistry, and joy. I have confidence that the new owner, Andrea, will continue to nurture the spirit of ASPA and guide the studio into a bright future.

I am so grateful for your trust, support, and friendship over the years. Thank you for allowing me to be part of your children's lives—it has been a privilege I will always treasure.

With love and gratitude,

Amy Cave
